

Elisabetta Cornago

Position/Department/Division/Institution/Organization

Research fellow, Centre for European Reform

Country

Belgium

Career history

Elisabetta Cornago is a research fellow at the Centre for European Reform (CER) in Brussels, Belgium. She focuses on EU energy and climate policy analysis from an economics perspective. Previously, Elisabetta worked as an environmental economist at the OECD, focusing on behavioural insights for the design of environmental and energy policy, on urban mobility policy and on resource efficiency and circular economy policy. Most recently, she worked as energy policy analyst at the International Energy Agency, focusing on energy efficiency policy and on its role for the post-pandemic recovery.

Elisabetta holds a PhD and an MA in economics from Université Libre de Bruxelles, and a BA in economics and public management from Università Bocconi.

Awards/Publications

IEA and Users TCP (2020), Behavioural insights and demand-side energy policy: an environment scan

OECD (2017), Tackling Environmental Problems with the Help of Behavioural Insights

Areas of expertise

Environmental economics

Behavioural insights for the design of environmental and energy policy

EU climate and energy policy