Career History

Trishna is currently a co-founder at Kaiku, an AI-powered platform connecting early-stage startups with investors.

She recently graduated as Schwarzman Scholar, a one-year fully funded masters at Tsinghua University in China. During the masters, she researched on US, China and Germany's green bond markets, drafted a policy brief on EU vs China carbon markets and participated at a roundtable at the Dutch Embassy in Beijing regarding the water crisis as input for the UN Water 2023 conference.

Prior to Schwarzman Scholars, Trishna worked at the World Bank Group in Washington, D.C. covering investments in telecommunication and technology companies, including green data centers. Previously, she was at Lazard advising companies in the consumer, food and retail sectors across Latin America and the Caribbean, and Abrdn Investments in London.

Trishna is an Economics graduate from the University of Warwick, during which she volunteered at the Red Cross, led the first student-run startup incubator in the UK and researched on the impact of women in venture capital.
